Machine Readable Convention Travel Documents: A Humanitarian Challenge in the Field of MRTDs

M. Alexander Beck

Senior Legal Officer

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)

Geneva, Switzerland

Machine Readable Convention Travel Documents: A Humanitarian Challenge in the Field of MRTDs

1. What are Convention Travel Documents (CTDs)?

- Travel documents/passports for Refugees and Stateless persons,
- Based on two conventions, i.e. international treaties: 1951 Refugee Convention, 1954 Statelessness Convention.

2. Who should/may issue CTDs?

- States parties to the 1951 and 1954 Conventions.

3. What about non States parties?

- State practice: aliens / foreigner passports.

4. Do CTDs need to be machine readable?

- Yes, ICAO has confirmed that they are travel documents in the sense of Annex 9 and Document 9303 and therefore need to comply with the respective standards, including machine readability and respect the 2010 and 2015 deadlines.
- Foreigner passports also need to be machine readable.

5. Can States use the same technology for CTDs and passports?

- Most States produce machine readable passports and other travel documents. For many reasons, including cost efficiency, States can and should therefore use the same technology for CTDs.

6. What are the similarities between passports and CTDs?

- The booklet should have the same quality and format in order to use the same print technology,
- Validity of a CTD can be the same as recommended for passports, i.e. 5 to 10 years, it should at least be valid for 1 or 2 years,
- One passport/CTD for one person, including children,
- The fees for a CTD should not exceed the fees for passports,
- Visa policies and requirements - similar to other aliens,
- Fees for exit, entry or transit visas should not exceed those for visas on foreign passports.

7. What are the main differences between a passport and a CTD?

- CTDs have a specific title and refer to the 1951 or 1954 Convention,
- CTDs shall be in at least two languages, one of which English or French and include specific explanatory text as mentioned in the Schedule to the 1951 and 1954 Conventions,
- CTDs are usually not valid for the country of origin of a refugee,
- The booklets should be blue, the refugee CTD with two diagonal stripes (top left),
- Depending on national laws and regulations, CTDs may be issued by a different authority than the passport authority,
- The issue of a CTD does not entitle the holder to the protection of diplomatic or consular authorities of the issuing country.

8. Why are CTDs a humanitarian challenge?

- Refugees and stateless persons cannot obtain national passports,
- They have legitimate needs and interests for travelling: family visits, education, training and work opportunities, etc.
- Low implementation rate:
 - 32 out of 148 States parties to the 1951 Refugee Convention issue machine readable CTDs (MRCTDs),
 - 13 out of 65 States parties to the 1954 Statelessness Convention issue MRCTDs.
- Limited state interest and weak lobby,
- Compared with passports, small production numbers of CTDs, hence higher production costs per booklet and limited financial interest among vendors.

9. What are the overall interests in issuing MRCTDs?

- Treat refugees and stateless persons with respect and dignity,
- Avoid illegality and prevent document fraud,
- Increase legal travel, border control mechanisms and security,
- Close the gap: refugees and stateless persons risk to remain behind in the general development of MRTDs.

10. What are UNHCR and ICAO doing?

- Close cooperation,
- Technical advice and guidance (mainly through ICBWG),
- Joint monitoring and advocacy.

Conclusion and action points:

- ▶ States parties to the 1951 and 1954 Conventions should issue CTDs to refugees and stateless persons legally staying on their territory. Non States parties may issue foreigner passports.
- ▶ CTDs need to be machine readable like national passports and other travel documents.
- ▶ States should use the same technology for passports and CTDs.
- ▶ Vendor companies should include CTDs systematically into their programme.
- ▶ UNHCR and ICAO develop technical guidance for States and vendors who should also actively seek advice from UNHCR and ICAO in order to increase implementation.
